DAN CARDIGAN

CHAPTER ONE

THE lilacs were budding as Monnie walked down High street. She took off her hat and swung it from her fingers, letting the May breeze ruffle the little bronze curls around her forehead. Spring again! It was glorious after the long winter. Spring—and Dan Cardigan's irregular, tormenting wooing would begin once more. Monnie's wayward heart thumped uncomfortably. Dan had been in Cleveland all winter. Now he would be back—was in fact, on his way at the moment. Monnie tried not to dance at the thought. Dan with his handsome, sullen face, those longlashed blue eyes whose glance had the power to make her smile or weep, would be staring down at her in a few hours.

"Where you goin', Miss O'Dare?" The mocking voice of Laura Grayling challenged her. Laura was 50, prim, an acid spinner. Monnie flushed. She felt that Miss Laura could see straight through her, knew all her thoughts. She said demurely, "Just hurrying home to supper. Lovely evening isn't it?"

"I thought," said Miss Laura, "that you must be goin' to a fire. You nearly knocked me down."

"I'm so sorry," murmured Monnie. "I—I was thinking of something else, I guess."

She hurried along, her cheeks like pomegranates.

Two more blocks—then home. She hoped Mom's headache would be better. And that Mark would be in a better temper. And that Mark would have passed his exams. And that Bill would be home. Poor Bill! He worked so hard. He was two years older than Monnie, who was 20. He had gone to work at 16 when Mr. O'Dare died, very suddenly, in the night. Bill had wanted to go to college. He had been eagerly ambitious but his ambitions had carried him only as far as the big new garage at Broad street and Vine, the one with the little brick house and the flaring red pumps. Bill was an "expert mechanic" now and proud of it. He tended the ailments of sick cars as a good physician does his patients. He had developed into a silent, rather brusque young man with a perpetual black rim under his fingernails.

Only Monnie and her mother suspected what went on under that fat, blubbery, Belvedere like so many small towns all over these United States, had its fair share of snobbery. Bill belonged to no particular group. He could not "go with" the crowd on the hill—the Waynes and the Millisons and the Hugdens—because he worked in a garage. Hank Wayne and Lucy Millison and Ernest and John Hugden went away to college, as did most of the other young people from the Hill. When they came home from school at Christmas time or during the summer holidays they had a series of parties which were duly recorded in the Belvedere Argus. Miss Anestice Cory, who had been society editor of the Argus for 20 years, delighted in their doings, always read about the parties. The young people who lived on the Hill seemed to her a golden group, enviable beyond belief.

MARK O'DARE, who was 13 and in his freshman year at High School, was a little too young to feel the pinch of poverty as the others did. It was Kay, 16, golden-haired, a junior in the tall stone High School, who minded most of all. Kay hated being left out of things... had lived on the wrong side of town in the shabby little shingled cottage which had been the only thing left to the O'Dares when "darling Papa" had gone.

Monica O'Dare sighed. The day had been warm and business in Mr. Vernon's drug store, where she worked, had been unusually brisk. She was tired. She did hope things would be smooth at home. She wanted to look fresh and unworried the first in the shabby little shingled cottage for months. She shivered, thinking of all the girls Dan must have met during the winter in Cleveland. Dan was "learning the business" in his uncle's mill. He was 21, the Cardigans' only son. They were proud of him, and Dan, it must be admitted, was rather proud of himself. He had left an eastern college the year before to go into "The Works" and it was felt, in the family, that the boy had done a fine thing.

Monnie wondered, for the hundredth time, how she had had the great luck to attract Dan. Hadn't she been in love with him for years—since second year high school, really? And hadn't it seemed the most fantastic dream come true, two years ago, when Dan had first begun to notice her?

She went over the scene in her mind again. She cherished it. It had been during the first week she had clerked at the drug store. It was July. High school commencement was just behind her. She had been, she remembered, wearing a thin white dress—dotted swiss. It was her class day dress. Her mother hadn't wanted her to wear it to work, had said that it was highly suitable. But Monnie, with a gentle persistence that surprised even herself, had worn it. Something had told her to look her best that day. Maybe it was the knowledge that Dan Cardigan was back in town.

SHE had been arranging the perfume bottles in the case, her back turned to the door, when she heard his voice. That slow, deep drawl had set her pulse pounding. She went on, fingering the squat crystal containers, afraid to turn around and betray what she was feeling. Then she heard Mr. Vernon's good-natured, "Guess there's somebody you know here, Dan. Meet my new helper. Guess you two know each other."

She had turned, hoping the nervous pulse in her throat, now beating madly, didn't reveal itself. She had been rewarded for her calm demureness by a flash of interest in Dan Cardigan's smoldering eyes. Her own, velvet lashed, with their amber depths, were lifted innocently to his.

"God, make him like me, make him like me!" she had prayed, with simple fervor.

Well, he had. And he did—she hoped! Perhaps this summer, this week, things would be settled between them. Perhaps—it might be as simple as this—Dan would come to see her tonight and say: "Let's cut down to High Springs Saturday and be married."

He hadn't asked her yet, in so many words. But everyone in town knew she was "Dan Cardigan's girl." Everyone expected him to ask her. Only Monnie, herself, sometimes felt a sick pang of apprehension. When they were together it was all right. Dancing or riding down the yellow roads in Dan's old roadster. It was when she was alone, when her mother looked at her anxiously, worriedly, not speaking her thoughts, that Monnie knew terror—terror at the thought of losing Dan.

She turned in, at length between the ragged lines of privet that bordered the red brick walk, and went, with brisk step, toward the little white house. For the thousandth time she gave no outward signs of it. Not for the world would she have hurt her mother's feelings. The O'Dares had been used to better things. Before Papa's death they had had a trim red brick house farther out, with sloping lawns, and a colored man to keep the borders tidy. Papa had had a little car, too, and they had been a prosperous little family. Now everything was changed. Monnie, in spite of her few years, had a burden to carry. Bill helped but it was Monnie to whom the mother looked for every thing.

"Hello, there!" She hung her hat on the outmoded "hail tree" (how she hated that thing!) and passed through to the kitchen. Mrs. O'Dare was at the stove, stirring something. There was the mingled smell of cooking food. Beets bubbled in a big pot and from the oven floated the odor of meat loaf. "Hot!" Monnie said simply, pushing back the ringlets of bronze hair and sighing. She was wishing, this night, for cool food on silver salvers, for a great high room with silvery green curtains swishing at the windows and a man's face it wore Dan's features) smiling down at her. She saw herself wearing organdie of palest pink, flowing to her toes. There were blue slippers on her feet.

"Mother!" The shrill, girlish voice of Kate brought Monnie abruptly back to earth. Kay stood in the doorway, her youthful bosom heaving, with some real or fancied grievance, her eyes, gentian-blue where Monnie's were amber-dark, smoldering.

"Mother! You said you'd press my linen and you didn't!"

MONNIE compressed her lips. "Why didn't you do it yourself? You know Mother's worn out as it is!" Mrs. O'Dare intervened.

"I'm sorry, honey. I didn't seem to get around to it. I was on the go all day." Her fine, delicately lined face was flushed and tired. Monnie felt a surge of affection for her and with it the familiar flare of impatience Kay's unreasonableness so often evoked.

"I'll do it after supper," Mrs. O'Dare said gently.

Monnie swung. "You won't do any such thing! You'll go and lie down while Kay and I do the dishes. You had that bad headache yesterday and you're a wreck now." Her eyes blazed into Kay's. It was all very well to sympathize with the younger girl (Monnie did—more passionately than she dared admit) but this bullying of her mother was more than she could bear.

She followed the sulking youngster into the hall, shutting the door behind her. In a low voice she said, "How can you, Kay? You know she's tired out. Dr. Allen said—"

Kay shrugged her shoulders. Petulantly she muttered, "All you care about is getting your own way. If you were going out with Dan Cardigan it'd be a different story."

Monnie flushed a deep scarlet. What did Kay know about Dan's arrival back in town? The unfairness of her sister's attitude cut her deeply.

"Dan's back in town," Kay said spitefully. "And I bet he never even telephoned you."

Monnie's heart began to beat thickly, painfully. She felt almost suffocated. But she managed to say, with dignity, "I knew he was coming. I heard from him the other day."

Kay smiled wisely. "Bet you didn't see him driving down Main street with Sandra about half-past two? Oh, no, he wouldn't bother to come around—n't till he's good and ready. And when he comes he'll find you waiting right where he left you."

Sandra—Dan—that very afternoon! Monnie couldn't believe it! Sandra had been in the store at noon, hadn't said anything at all about expecting Dan. There was only one train he might have come on and that was the early morning one. Then why hadn't he called her?

She felt quite sick. A little warning pulse in her temple began to throb.

Kay plunged on. "Bet he'd sing a different tune if he came here, just once, and found you'd gone out with someone else. But no, you're always ready and waiting, whenever he happens to take a notion to drop around! I should think you'd have more—"

MONICA O'DARE

"Kay!" A quiet voice interrupted this tirade. Mrs. O'Dare, pale but with a certain grimace about her gentle mouth, stood in the doorway, staring at her younger daughter, Kay wilted. "I'm sorry, Mom," she said. "I didn't mean it—"

"You run along and finish setting the table," Mrs. O'Dare said in a cool voice. Kay went, Monnie, whose knees had begun to feel oddly like straw, sat down on the little old Windsor chair beside the door.

"Maybe if you'd have time for a bath before supper," Mrs. O'Dare began doubtfully, "you'd feel better. You're tired out. I've got the heater lighted."

Monnie smiled at her. "Thanks, Mother. You think of everything."

SHE went upstairs with a step determinedly swift. Not for worlds would she let any of them know what it cost her to hide the hurt in her heart. Dan back—and he hadn't called her! When she was fairly aching for the sight of him, for the clasp of his hand! Maybe Kay had been mistaken, maybe she had been merely spiteful! But no, even Kay in a tantrum was not likely to invent the spectacle of Dan and Sandra Lawrence together.

At the thought Monnie's pulses began to hammer and that feeling of sinking—sinking—smote her once more. Sandra, who was so cool and sure of herself, who after a year at finishing school in the east had gone to Paris to return clanking with bracelets, radiant of strange, alluring scents, wearing the most extreme and bizarre costumes Belvedere had seen these many moons.

Monnie quieted the raging tumult within her. Dan and Sandra—why, there was nothing to it. They belonged to the same crowd, knew the same people. It was only the merest accident, probably, that they had met that day. Sandra knew how Dan felt about Monnie. Didn't she stop in at the store often to whisper charmingly, "I suppose you've heard from someone in the city? I knew that was why you looked so pretty today?"

Monnie was proud of Sandra's friendship. Sandra, who could know anyone and was invited everywhere, who was so clever and might have been a writer or an artist if she put her mind to it (she said so herself). Only Sandra had been born to money. The Lawrences owned the paper mills out on the River Road and Sandra, last of the line, lived with her father in the handsome stone pile on the Hill. Near the Cardigans. That was how she happened to know Dan so well. Dan—Dan—Dan!

Monnie ran water in the tub and sifted in a handful of pine-needle salts. Maybe he would call, any minute now. People always did telephone the instant you got into the tub. She shut off the faucet, struck by the dreadful thought that she might miss him. But mother would know how important it was. Mother would call her!

Trembling with excitement, Monnie dashed through her bath, slipped into clean underthings and donned the coolest of her few frocks, a last year linen that had been laid aside when new and was now the color of the late evening sky.

"Monnie!" That was Kay's voice, on the landing.

"Coming!" Monnie sang, almost gaily.

Kay linked her arm in that of her elder sister. "I'm sorry I was so nasty," she said, very low. "I didn't mean it. Only—only—everything's so rotten—"

Monnie stifled the alarm she felt. "How do you mean?" Kay sniffed. "Oh, this miserable town and the people and the way you get high-hatted if you're poor. I'm going to get out of it—"

THEY were almost at the foot of the stairs now. Monnie warned: "Don't let Mother hear you!" She thought, "Poor kid! I must do something for her—must help her to have a good time."

They all sat down. Monnie looked around, her eyes questioning.

"Bill?"

She thought her mother's smile seemed forced. "He phoned he had to work and would get something to eat near the shop."

Scissors Labor Savers In Every Housewife's Kitchen

Shears Take the Place of Electric Chopper and Mincer

By SISTER MARY

Perhaps one of the cheapest time and labor-saving conveniences in the kitchen is a good-sized pair of sharp shears. We all carry these electric choppers and mincers, but most of us have a pair of strong sharp shears that will chop small meats, vegetables, and so on, easily and quickly.

Celery and peppers are quickly cut for salads. The stems of celery with several stalks, then cut crosswise. The celery can be cut as fine or coarse as wanted.

There's no danger of making these unsightly scars on one's thumbs when shears are used in place of a knife. So often when dicing meats and vegetables with a knife the person against the thumb of the left hand is given enough to sting against the skin.

This makes an excellent place to slice from fruits and vegetables to settle, and, from black licorice through the end of the thumb are the results.

HANDY FOR STEAK, HAM
Lettuce is easily shredded, tops cut from heads, green onions finely minced and grapefruit prepared by means of the shears.

An easy way to prepare fresh meat is to slice it with shears. Use a large knife and then "peel" each slice with the shears. The meat can be prepared this way too.

Candied fruits and marshmallows are easily prepared for desserts when equipped with shears. Dip them in water to prevent sticking while cutting.

After using shears they should be washed and scaled and lightly oiled with any salad oil. Then putting away. Keep them in a drawer away from the children because they must have sharp points and be sharp on the edges if they give the desired satisfactory results.

Use the shears to prepare the marshmallows and fruit in the springtime dessert.

SPRING DUTY DESSERT
One-half pound marshmallows, 1 cup whipping cream, 1 cup candied cherries, 1/2 cup crushed pineapple, 1 cup pecan nuts, 4 tablespoons powdered sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, few grains salt.

Cut fruit in small pieces. Cut marshmallows in quarters. Whip cream until firm, add sugar and vanilla and fold in prepared marshmallows, fruit and nuts. Turn into a mold. Let set for several hours to chill and become firm.

What New York
Is Wearing
By ANNABELLE WORTHINGTON

It is not surprising that the fashionable women of New York are wearing a great deal of light-colored, soft, and comfortable clothing.

There is immense satisfaction in having a modern dress of clean cut sterile lines for early Spring for street wear.

It gives one that trim comfortable feeling.

Today's model is simple in design transparent women in any checked pattern.

Tomorrow's Menu

The Edmonton and Northern Alberta Aero club is a worthy representative organization of no mean city. It is first in both time and place in the Dominion. Its stability of time can never be taken away from it, for it was formed on August 2, 1927. Not does it appear that its proud position of primacy in place will ever be lost. For five years now, the local club has been in the van. The old official government reports give it that position every year with astounding regularity. What a record! Three of its members have reached the topmost echelons of fame in flying circles in the Dominion: for three years in succession, Edmonton pilots have won the Delaney McKee trophy.

Goody Gomez Southpaws His Way to Impressive Victory Over Mackmen

FOX'S SMASH KEEPS VERNON FROM SHUTOUT

Yanks Take Ball Game 2-1 With Earnshaw the Victim

NEW YORK, April 19.—Vernon Gomez, having won the New York Yankees, picked up his feud with the Athletics yesterday and where he left off last season, besting the big George Earnshaw 2-1 in a brilliant battle that gave the Yanks a record of five straight victories in six of the youthful campaign.

But for a pitching double down the left field foul line by Jimmie Fox, after a pass to Max Bishop and an error by Joe Sewell had put them on first and second in the fourth with two out, Gomez would have secured his personal 100th victory against the A's with a shutout.

RIPLEY WOULD ENTHUSE

WASHINGTON, April 19.—A large seventh inning and some of the breaks he missed earlier yesterday gave Boston a 5 to 4 win over Washington and the second tie in the series.

The stretch frame opened with the Senators leading 4 to 1. Then, with Boston two down, Whitehill, on the mound for Washington, threw a wilder trying to catch Shee off second. Friberg, who was on first and Shee both advanced, and then on Johnson's short single into left, scored.

BOX WALKER TIGERS

DETROIT, April 19.—Chicago's hard hitting White Sox, once hampered by Detroit Tigers, got their big guns going yesterday.

Tigers all over Nainville and winning the first of the series, 12 to 0, in all, they led in 15 hits, one a home run by Kier.

Tommy Bragdon, Detroit's starting pitcher, lasted only until the third inning, then Chicago routed the plate and 10 men forced him. Elmer Heggett relieved him, allowed three runs in the fourth before he settled down.

ST. LOUIS, April 19.—George Blahodier, in his starting game of the season, closed in the run which gave the Browns a 1 to 0 edge over Cleveland Indians here yesterday.

Blahodier and Melvin Hader, who pitched his season's opener, Hader, purposely walked Ferey in the fifth to get at Blahodier, who promptly singled, scoring him.

COAL CITY TO HOLD ALBERTA TRACK EVENTS

Junior and Women's Meet Scheduled for Drumheller

DRUMHELLER, Alta., April 19.—Authorization to hold junior and women's provincial field and track championships at Drumheller on July 1 and 2, was given yesterday to a committee of the Drumheller branch Army and Navy Veterans of Canada, by J. W. Jenkinson of Calgary, Vice-President and B. W. Bellamy, of Wetaskiwin, Secretary.

The committee of the Alberta branch after making an inspection of the athletic park. The two officials expressed themselves as well pleased with the layout of the park and announced that all possible assistance would be given the promoters to make the championship events a success.

Efforts will be made to obtain Perry Page and his Grads as a feature event for this occasion, local committee men announced after the meeting.

A representative body of Drumheller Citizens were appointed to day to serve on a special committee to handle the meet, while it is possible the public and high schools will hold elimination competition on all parts of the Drumheller Valley. Charles Adams, well known manager of Drumheller's touring football team last year, is secretary of the committee.

BELGIAN TEAM SETTING PACE AT MONTREAL

Italian Pair Also at Top in Bike Marathon

MONTREAL, April 19.—(Gaining five laps in a brief but intensely fought race that broke down the Belgian team, the Italian pair, Stanekovich and Frederic Gilewski, sturdy young Belgians, fought their way to a double on top of the last day bicycle race here as the third day opened this morning.

Climbing with the Belgians but losing his ground to cover, Hebebert, the Italian duo, also reached top place with the result that at one time no less than five teams shared the leadership, each having covered 413.7 miles since 12:01 M.

The other teams sharing the five day bicycle race were the leaders of the early evening, Billy Dorset and Lou Roth, Victoria, Al Crossley and Bartlett, United States pair, and the first Davis, Leimberger and Cabaret, and Roth still fought the field because of most points captured in sprint.

Harry Hagan, United States, and Lou Eder, Toronto, were fast in a series of sprints that they were forced out of the race, the rallying for the dropouts of the team at that time each night.

THE TWYNANTES
Story by MAL COCHRAN Directed by GEORGE SCARBO

As all the lads worked on the ark, wee Cobby suddenly yelled, "Hark! I hear a lot of noises. Sounds like animals to me."

The Midget Man replied, "You're right. The midget beasts are filled with fright. They never know just what to do when big floods come, you see."

"Oh, this flood is a little new," said

The Midget Man said, still in the free, soon said, "I guess it's up to me to give the call that always brings my pet beasts on the run."

He put his hands up to his face, a strange call echoed from the place Sam Dugby. "They will be surprised to see what we have done."

The small beasts came from everywhere, and, "Windy, shouted

Duncy: "Who's his heaps of fun?"

Wendy: "Wendy answered: 'Sure! For us.' The beasts, though are real tame."

"The water comes up near our faces and we can big advantage with the water. I can advantage with the water, compared to the water."

"I have Scouty shouted: 'Hey, you boys, please work instead of making noise. The ark is almost finished and the animals are waiting for us.'"

"We'll get the sides on good and fast. Everything will be all right. I'm going to see the animals first. I'm late."

"Hey, look there! We've built a ark for you. A dry ridge is yours!"

"We've fixed a plank that you can't see. Be careful, now, and take your time. You're going to take about the wild food any more."

Instead of being panicky, the beasts were calm as they could be. They murmured, directed them, as they walked up the board.

The Midget Man, then shouted: "Get! Be sure and save a place for me. I'm late!"

Wendy: "Wendy loudly roared."

WHEAT SLIDES FROM EARLIER 3-CENT CLIMB

WINNIEP. — 19-Letup in buying support to the final minutes of trading resulted in wheat future prices sliding sharply at the close of the Winnipeg grain market today. Falling rapidly from earlier stages, wheat values finished only 1 1/2 cents above the previous close.

Later, trading in British currencies on foreign exchange continued to be brisk. However, affected traders' profit-taking was so rapid that it was only a slight daily profit to the last minute.

It was expected, however, of 1 1/2 cents was marked up. May future closing at 24 1/2, July 24 1/2, and October 24 1/2.

Off to a fast start. A field of speedboats scud across the olympic rowing course at Long Beach on champions' regatta day. Ed Gielick in C33 was winner. Note oil derricks in background.

What the interior of the Akron looked like. Lewis Walck, machinist's mate, who perished with 70 others, is shown on the gangway leading into the control room.

Ships that pass in the day. With its 500 crack cadets lining decks and rigging, the Italian training ship Colombo greets its seagoing countryman, Conte Di Savoia, near Key West, Fla.

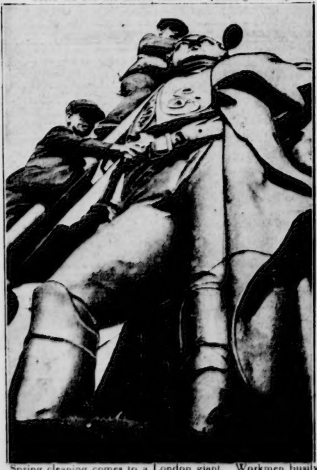

And repeal of prohibition also calls for paint all round. "Ariadne," goddess of wine, figurehead on a waterfront cafe at Venice, Calif., is being prettied for better days.

Yosuke Matsuoka, peppery representative of the flowery kingdom, who calls a spade a spade and who recently walked out on the League of Nations, visited the Detroit Ford plant with son Edsel as guide.

Cobb on the "corn"? Nope, just three point two. When it comes to froth blowing, Irvin S. Cobb is right up in front. Here we see the noted humorist quaffing thirstily.

Spring cleaning comes to a London giant. Workmen busily engaged washing down the Duke of York's statue on the column in the Mall.

Akron survivors off to Washington. The three survivors of the Akron disaster at Floyd Bennett Airport, just before they took off by aeroplane to testify before Admiral Pratt: Richard Deal, M. E. Erwin and Lieut.-Com. Herbert Wiley. Deal and Erwin have hands bandaged, souvenirs of their harrowing experience.

The Hawks go fishing. Frank Hawks, noted speed pilot and holder of many aeroplane speed records, was one of the many who gathered at Cannel, N.Y., for the opening of trout fishing. Mrs. Hawks is with him.

Of the once mighty Akron, only a few small bits of wreckage remain. Linton Edward Eves of the coastguard cutter McDougall holds a section of duralumin pipe wrapped with kapok, picked up where the airship crashed.

Though many of Scotland's unemployed at Clydebank are having a thin time of it, they managed to tighten their belts and raise a lusty cheer for the visiting Prince of Wales.
